ECO-CASKETS TALK OF THE TOWN AT DEATH INDUSTRY EXPO

Chicago Tribune

As some Chicagoans prepare Halloween costumes portraying the dead, death-industry professionals are gathered in Chicago to discuss business strategies regarding the dearly departed.

The National Funeral Directors Association International Convention and Expo opened Sunday and runs through Wednesday at McCormick Place. The group is holding its convention in conjunction with the Wheeling-based Cremation Association of North America for the first time, bringing together two seemingly competing sectors of the disposition industry.

Among the issues up for discussion are the rise of "green" funerals, which can include biodegradable caskets, organic or locally grown flowers, and burial without embalment.

"As consumers, they make choices to live more environmentally friendly lifestyles, and they're also starting to look at ways that they can make their funerals green," said Jessica Koth, spokeswoman for the Wisconsin-based National Funeral Directors Association.

Another trend is that more families are opting for cremation, often as a more cost-effective alternative to traditional burials. The Cremation Association estimates that more than 44 percent of those who die in the U.S. in 2015 will be cremated, according to a 2008 report.

Another topic up for discussion at the convention is alkaline hydrolysis, an emerging technique that uses water, chemicals and heat to accelerate natural decomposition, Koth said. The process, which is legal only in a small number of states, serves as an alternative to cremation, with less use of fossil fuels.

"There are so many alternatives available that funeral directors and cremationists need to know how to respond to that," said Mark Matthews, president of the Cremation Association. "But we're not sure how the consumer is going to react to it."

As at most conventions, organizers have planned several social outings.

"A lot of people that come are often the only people in their town who own a funeral home," Matthews said. "So they come to Chicago and they kind of get to let their hair down."

SPEAKING OF DEAD ...

We're nothing if not listmakers here at RedEye. When we heard about the National Funeral Directors Association International Convention and Expo in Chicago, "Six Feet Under"—that HBO drama about a family living in a funeral home—immediately came to mind. Here are a few others that attendees would be sure to appreciate. Most of these shows are dead themselves, BTW. REDEYE

Unions could sink new CTA budget

GOING PUBLIC

Tracy Swartz

» tswartz@tribune.com
» @tracyswartz

Don't pull out the champagne quite yet, CTA riders. In fact, you might want to prepare to whine. Let's wait before celebrating last week's announcement that the CTA will look to management cuts and employee rule changes to close its $277 million shortfall.

Though CTA President Forrest Claypool said he's optimistic the unions will agree to these terms, there's still a possibility that CTA riders could see fare hikes and/or service cuts next year. Worse, Claypool indicated that service cuts probably would be levied before fare hikes because the economy has taken a toll on rider paychecks.

Big mistake. The CTA shouldn't even consider service cuts until it fixes rail slow zones, which affected nearly 11 percent of the system this month, and institutes bus rapid transit, an express bus program that would rely on bus-only lanes and traffic signal priority for buses.

The CTA last hiked fares in 2009; last year, the agency cut 18 percent of bus service and 9 percent of rail service. Trains and buses became more crowded.

Who wants to wait even longer on the South Side for a train that will crawl along the Red Line, which has been plagued with slow zones for the last few months?

There is no ETA for the end of slow zones, which this month affected every line except for the Orange Line and Loop tracks.

Things are looking better on the bus front. Transit advocates and leaders, including two from the CTA, visited Mexico City last week to evaluate the city's bus rapid transit program, which has been running since 2005 and features dedicated bus lanes and shorter travel times.

The trip was paid for with a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation, a group devoted to sustainable transportation, said Ngoan Le, vice president of program for the Chicago Community Trust, which helped coordinate

RIDER'S BLOCK

My pledge to ride every CTA bus line continues. I rode the No. 106-East 103rd last week and boiled my review down to a tweet.

@tracyswartz 23 min from 95th St Red Line to 103rd St bus depot. Stops by Olive-Harvey. Seems like bus could have a route longer than just a few miles.

130 routes down, 9 to go!

Next up: No. 90N-Harlem.

travel plans.

The CTA will begin testing express bus service next year from 103rd Street and Stony Island to Madison Street, according to Claypool's budget recommendations.

Meanwhile, the agency is studying the viability of bus rapid transit on an area bounded by Howard Street on the north, Western Avenue on the west, Ashland Avenue on the east and 95th Street on the south.

There's a separate study in the works for express bus service along the lakefront from Howard Street to 103rd Street. Save the celebration for when those programs are in place.

Are you hearing them now?

The CTA board has three hearings scheduled about the 2012 budget: Nov. 2 at Westinghouse High School, 3223 W. Franklin Blvd.; Nov. 7 at CTA headquarters, 567 W. Lake St; and Nov. 10 at Kennedy-King College, 740 W. 63rd St. All hearings will be held at 6 p.m.

Trains and brains

The Jackson stop has turned from Red Line to blood line. The masterminds of Fear City, a haunted attraction in Morton Grove, have created a haunted "Jackson" stop that may gross riders out more than the actual Jackson stop. Tickets are available for $25 at fearcitychicago.com.

THE McRIB

Is it worth the hype?

McDonald's recently announced that the pressed-meat-bbq-sauce-and-pickled wonder known as the McRib will be returning to its restaurants until Nov. 14. We asked some of RedEye's finest whether they thought the hubbub over the sandwich was justified.

I'd rather gnaw on a full rack of ribs, but McRib is a nice trade-off when you're on the go.

OCCUPATIONAL HAZARD

M-Rahm says city has balancing act on its hands with Occupy Chicago

Chicago Tribune

More than two dozen people affiliated with an activist nursing group stood outside Mayor Emanuel's office Monday to protest the arrest of two nurses during the weekend's Occupy Chicago rally in Grant Park.

The National Nurses United members chanted "Arrest the 1 percent," a reference to the slogan "We are the 99 percent," which the Occupy Wall Street movement coined to signify the complaint that a small amount of Americans control a disproportionate amount of the nation's wealth.

The City Hall protest came a day after two nurses with the union were arrested for refusing to leave after the park's 11 p.m. closing time. They were among more than 130 people who were arrested early Sunday.

Jan Rodolfo, 36, the nursing group's Midwest director, said she was arrested at 2:45 a.m. Sunday, charged with an ordinance violation and released at 1:15 a.m. Monday. Another nurse, Martese Chism, and an unspecified number of medics also were arrested.

"We were among the last protesters released, for no good reason that we can tell, except for they clearly knew when the media cameras had left," Rodolfo said. "We were tearful and exhausted and shellshocked."

On Monday, Emanuel said the city has a balancing act on its hands with the protest issue.

"I have to enforce the law as well as respect people's First Amendment rights," Emanuel said during an unrelated news conference.

Later, the Police Department issued a lengthy memo saying that Felicia Davis, Emanuel's first deputy chief of staff, had been trying to meet with protest leaders but they had canceled. The police district commander or his aide routinely meets with the demonstrators to talk about the events of the day, the department said in its statement.

Rodolfo said her group is asking Emanuel to "act like mayors across the country" and allow protesters to set up a 24/7 encampment in Chicago without fear of arrest.

"A person and their rights don't stop at 11 p.m. in the city of Chicago," Rodolfo said.

A growing 'going' problem

"Some of the Occupy Wall Street encampments spreading across the U.S. have access to portable toilets [such as those on the City Hall lawn in Los Angeles] or, better yet, restrooms with sinks and running water [as in Ft. Wayne, Ind.]. Others require their residents to forage on their own. At Zuccotti Park, this means long waits for the restrooms at a nearby Burger King or a Starbucks. Anyone with restroom-related issues should prepare to join the revolution in diapers."

Occupying MTV

From news services

Every good real-life drama needs a reality show—and now, the Occupy Wall Street movement has one.

MTV announced Monday an upcoming “True Life” special set to air Nov. 5. “True Life: I’m Occupying Wall Street” introduces viewers to a group of 20-something protesters, including college students Kait and Caitlin, who are worried they won’t be able find jobs after graduation and have recruited friends to join the cause.

As Occupy Wall Street, a series of grass-roots demonstrations against income inequality, corporate greed and a list of other loosely defined social ills, heads into its second month of occupation, and mini-movements heat up around the globe, here’s a look at some talking points related to the protest. TRIBUNE, CNN, REUTERS CONTRIBUTED.

Sept. 17 The date Occupy Wall Street started with a demonstration of several hundred protesters in lower Manhattan’s Zuccotti Park. The movement has since spread across the globe, and into hundreds of cities.

“These days, a lot of folks who are doing the right thing aren’t rewarded, and a lot of folks who aren’t doing the right thing are rewarded.”

— President Obama, at a news conference Oct. 6 where he sympathized with protesters’ frustrations but also defended financial bailouts and financial reforms.

“We are the 99 percent”

— the rallying cry of protesters, who believe the richest 1 percent of Americans hold too much of the country’s wealth and should pay higher taxes.

9.1% the national unemployment rate in September, according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.

35.6% The amount of the nation’s wealth held by the richest 1 percent of the population in 2009, according to a study released in March by the liberal-leaning Economic Policy Institute.

49% The percentage of Occupy Wall Street protesters who are younger than 30, according to a pollster survey of 198 people onsite, the Wall Street Journal reports.

Netflix announced Monday that it lost 800,000 U.S. subscribers in the past three months. GETTY IMAGES

A Netflix downer

For Netflix, the hits keep on coming—the bad kind.

The latest thwack: Netflix lost 800,000 U.S. subscribers in the quarter that just ended, which was littered with PR nightmares including a price hike and the Qwikster debacle. It was the first time in years that Netflix's U.S. customer base shrank instead of grew.

Netflix spoke bluntly about the recent problems in its third-quarter earnings letter, released late Monday.

"The last few months ... have been difficult for shareholders, employees, and most unfortunately, many members of Netflix," Netflix CEO Reed Hastings wrote in a letter to shareholders. "We've hurt our hard-earned reputation, and stalled our domestic growth."

Netflix said it was focusing on the future, promising customers that "we are done with pricing changes."

But it doesn't think the subscriber hemorrhaging is at an end.

rhaging is at an end.

Netflix had 23.8 million total U.S. subscribers as of Sept. 30, down from 24.6 million three months earlier. Around 21.5 million customers had streaming subscriptions, and just under 14 million had DVD subscriptions, with most customers mixing the two.

By the end of the current quarter, which wraps up Dec. 31, Netflix expects those numbers to drop further. It forecast that it will have 20 million to 21.5 million streaming customers and up to 11.3 million DVD subscribers in the U.S.

STOCK PLUMMETS

Even though Netflix reported earnings that beat analysts' expectations, shares of the company plunged 27 percent in after-hours trading Monday to close at $85.75. In July, the stock was trading at almost $300.

According to csnne.com, if compensation talks between the Cubs and Boston Red Sox aren't resolved by Nov. 1, Commissioner Bud Selig will step in. "They have until Nov. 1—Theo and Ben and all the other parties involved," Selig said. "They'll either get it done or they won't. If they don't, then I will."

The new guy

Theo Epstein's moving in—and other Cubs employees may be moving on

RedEye

After weeks of speculation followed by wrangling over compensation for the Boston Red Sox, the Cubs finally will introduce Theo Epstein at a news conference at 11 a.m. Tuesday at Wrigley Field. This move is just one of several changes for the team, and other personnel shifts could be on the horizon. Take our quiz to test your knowledge of the Cubs' staff. If you've been reading up on the team's tribulations the past few weeks, it will be a piece of cake. If not, no worries—you'll still learn something.

1. Theo Epstein is ...

- A. The Cubs' new president of baseball operations
- B. The Cubs' new general manager
- C. That guy from the "can you hear me now?" commercials, only with contact lenses

2. Jed Hoyer is ...

- A. The Cubs' new chief of Little League scouting
- B. The Cubs' new general manager and a previous associate of Epstein's
- C. Going to need a heavy coat now that he's moving from San Diego

3. Jason McLeod is ...

- A. Formerly the San Diego Padres' top amateur scout
- B. A GOP presidential candidate
- C. The Cubs' new assistant general manager and an associate of Hoyer's

4. Crane Kenney is ...

- A. The Cubs' president of business operations
- B. Going to have diminished authority with Epstein's hire
- C. A construction firm

5. Mike Quade is ...

- A. Putting up an optimistic front amid all the changes in the Cubs' front office
- B. Signed through 2012 as Cubs manager, but considered to be on the hot seat

C. Caught between a rock and a hard place

6. Ryne Sandberg is ...

- A. Opening a restaurant in Chicago
- B. Potentially still upset he was passed over for the Cubs' managerial job
- C. On Epstein's radar, having been considered for Boston's Triple-A managerial job

Forte's big payday must wait

Alex Quigley
» redeyesports@tribune.com
» @alexquigley

Most of the Chicago sports focus Tuesday will be on the Cubs, as a new Theocracy is ushered in at 1060 W. Addison St. But after the news conference is done and Cubs fans prepare for 17 straight World Series titles, it'll be a quiet week with no basketball and a Bears bye Sunday. (Thank goodness the Blackhawks have three games in five days.)

And with no opponent for Bears fans to focus on this week, the sporadic clamoring to give running back Matt Forte a big contract extension will roar louder than ever.

However, no matter how many pitchforks and torches show up at Halas Hall this weekend, the Bears shouldn't bow to the mob's demands.

Forte's certainly the MVP for the Bears so far. He's averaging 96 rushing yards and 60 receiving yards per game. Without his efforts, it's probably a lost season on the lakefront.

During the past 18 months in Mike Martz's offense, Forte has gone from "a poor man's Marshall Faulk" to "Wow, he's kinda sorta looking like Marshall Faulk." And he's doing it with a blocking unit that's clearly in the bottom third of the league's offensive lines.

But for his first three years in Chicago, Forte's been mostly just OK. Just two seasons ago, he averaged only 3.6 yards per carry and scored a mere four touchdowns. (Everyone reading this who drafted him in fantasy leagues in 2009 just nodded their head and swore under their breath.)

His start this season has been remarkable, though throwing bags of money at running backs in today's NFL is hardly a guarantee for future production. (See: DeAngelo Williams, Chris Johnson or Jamaal Charles' left knee.) Yet I do think the Bears have to find a way to keep Forte in navy and orange.

The answer: the NFL's franchise tag. Forte gets one year with more than $8 million guaranteed, the Bears get 16 more games to see if No. 22's worth a mega-year mega-deal. It's the right move for right now.

And Bears fans can get back to worrying about the important things, like catching Detroit or where Jay and Kristin ate last night.

1 Congratulate Roy Williams on his first TD with the Bears.	"Congrats, you're now two behind someone named Dane Sanzenbacher. Or is his first name Orville?"	He sounds like a country singer to me, so good for him.	"Congrats, you're now an official member of a team where NFL receivers go to die."	"Congratulations. You are now just three touchdowns from tying Cap Boso for 196th on the Bears."	"IT'S ABOUT DAMN TIME." I mean, "Oh hey Roy, nice work!"
2 What should the Bears do during their bye week?	Hmm, perhaps a little pumpkin picking in Kenosha ... or maybe finding some frickin' offensive linemen?!	Go shopping! They're in Chicago for gosh sake!	Fly back home! It takes about two weeks to travel across the pond.	Like, totally go to Fright Fest with that girl from biology class who is sooooo cute!	Cutler should visit an apple orchard to get the picks out of his system.
3 The Bears are already talking about playoff positioning. Thoughts?	I think they meant to say they're assuming the position.	The position with the leather helmet and the arm out! Does the Heisman pose	They're talking seating position, who's going to the games and where everyone's sitting.	Good. They just need to find the bracket where the Packers don't play. Like, I don't know, the CFL.	"Don't talk about playoffs. Are you kidding me? Playoffs?"
4 Collecting six interceptions in one game is like playing keep-away with an asthmatic 8-year-old or Scott Bolohan.	... rare coins. You want to collect good things. Coins are good.	... the Cubs and Theo Epstein winning World Series titles! A dream!	... intercepting 3.79 million square miles from Native Americans, just without the disease and starvation.	... "Paranormal Activity 3": either horrifying or hilarious, depending on whom you ask.
5 Who is DeMarco Murray?	My new best friend. And it has nothing to do with the fact he's on my fantasy team.	Maggie's dad. She's a third-grader at my school.	He's the Grinch who stole Jay Cutler's Christmases in Santa Claus, Ind., as a child.	An Italian-Irish American heartthrob hellbent on stopping terrorists—who also plays football.	The Cowboys' equivalent of Eagle-Eye Cherry. He debuted strong but might be forgotten in 10 years.

Male urination problems? Up at night having to "go"? Trouble starting your stream?

Revolutionary new drug-free formula helps you regain your youthful prostate function so you'll urinate less often and sleep through the night!

Are you a man who has to get up once or more during the night to urinate? Do you sometimes have trouble getting your stream to start? Do you look for restrooms wherever you go? Do you ever worry that you won't be able to hold it in? If you suffer with these types of prostate problems, don't give up hope because now there's good news!

Introducing Prostalex Plus, the amazing new all-natural supplement for men that helps solve your urination problems, improve prostate function, and boost prostate health so you won't need to urinate as often, you'll enhance urination function, and you'll finally be able to sleep through the night without any trips to the bathroom!

Powerful new formula helps end your urination problems.

The amazing new Prostalex Plus drug-free supplement has been scientifically formulated to reduce your need to urinate by combating the natural growth of your prostate, which occurs naturally as you age and is the cause of most urination problems in men.

Containing rare, high-potency, all-natural ingredients, the Prostalex Plus formula is unique because it not only stops your constant need to urinate, it helps improve your ability to urinate (so you'll no longer have trouble getting your stream to start), and it helps you maintain a healthy prostate. That means, with Prostalex Plus you can enjoy the freedom of not having to search out a men's room wherever you go, enjoy the luxury of uninterrupted sleep, and enjoy the peace of mind that goes along with having a healthy, youthful, optimally-functioning prostate.

TRIBUNE FILE

Numbers say Ryno's on deck

By K.C. Johnson

CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Ryne Sandberg will be the next manager of the Cubs.

The logic is as simple as 1, 23.

That's one, 23 in case the subtlety didn't take. But because Theo Epstein is such a numbers guy, we'll trust that he and Carmine followed.

This town has been blessed by the number 23. The Michael Jordan statue outside the United Center reminds us of that.

But beyond His Airness, think about the current golden age of this number: Derrick Rose is 23 years old. So is Jonathan Toews, and Patrick Kane will catch up next month. Every time Devin Hester adds to his NFL-record kick-return touchdown total, defenders failing in their pursuit see No. 23 racing away.

When White Sox general manager Ken Williams shocked the baseball world with his managerial hire, he turned to good ol' No. 23 in Robin Ventura.

So it has to be Sandberg, right?

Think about it: 23 days passed from the time Epstein's availability first entered mainstream media to when the Red Sox and Cubs released a joint statement announcing he'd be switching teams. On Sunday—Oct. 23 for those scoring at home—Epstein took out a full-page ad in the Boston Globe thanking Red Sox Nation.

Sure, Mike Quade technically still is the Cubs' manager. And, yes, we know he made his debut in that role on Aug., ahem, 23 of last year. But with No. 8 on the back of his Cubs jersey, he really has no chance.

Enough evidence exists that Epstein should make next season's City Series a No. 23 affair, Sandberg vs. Ventura. Now, if you'll excuse me, I'll go back to breaking down the NBA lockout, which has been going on for three months and—wait for it—23 days.

K.C. JOHNSON COVERS THE BULLS AND THE NBA FOR THE TRIBUNE.

HE SAID WHAT?

If words can get athletes into trouble with the universe for things they say, two football players could be in for some comeuppance down the road:

“THEY JUST QUIT. THAT'S WHAT NOTRE DAME FOOTBALL IS ALL ABOUT. THEY'RE NOT ANYTHING LIKE 'SC.”

—USC linebacker Chris Galippo, on the Irish refusing to use timeouts to stop the clock in the fourth quarter of Saturday's loss to the Trojans. Galippo later backed off his comments via Twitter.

“To me it's karma for all the bad stuff they've done in the past. Their offensive lineman hurt their own quarterback.”

—Detroit defensive lineman Ndamukong Suh, hinting that the Atlanta Falcons, who beat the Lions on Sunday, have been guilty of dirty play. Atlanta QB Matt Ryan was hurt during the third quarter of the game.

Fat-tastic

Prepare for winter with these 7 calorie bombs

By Erin Sarlis

FOR REDEYE

Hey you, with the salad! It's nearly November in Chicago, which means, it's time to trade in the bikini-friendly fare for some serious comfort food. Here's a look at some of the decadent dishes that have popped up at seven recently opened spots. We've taken the liberty of rating their richness from 1 (add a little padding) to 5 (ready for hibernation).

Jove T's Hot Stuff pop-up treats

J Bar

610 N. Rush St. 312-660-6000

Friday is your last chance to get a taste of this pop-up dessert event cooked up by Jove T. Hubbard, the pastry chef at Primehouse. Hubbard dreams up new desserts every week, which are served in J Bar from 3-5 p.m. Fridays or until they're gone. Past sweets have ranged from pineapple upside-down cake with brandied cherries to chocolate croissant bread pudding to cheddar-apple pie ($5 each).

Rating: 4

Pork belly nuggets

Morso

340 W. Armitage Ave.
773-880-9280

Deep-frying and cheese-dunking go hand in hand as part of this playfully indulgent dish served in the cocktail lounge above Lincoln Park restaurant Morso. Duroc pork belly is braised with garlic sage and rosemary and then cut into nuggets and spread with date jam. After a dunk in the deep fryer, it's paired with brie fondue for dipping ($9).

Rating: 5

Cheese cookies

Miko's Flipside Cafe
1846 N. Damen Ave.
773-645-9664

These dainty cookies are only the size of a silver dollar, but they pack a punch of cheesy flavor. Made with cheddar and smoked gouda, they have a crispy cookie-like texture and pair smartly with any warm beverage all winter long. (50 cents each or 12 for $5).

Rating: 1 (unless consumed in mass quantities)

Grilled hot dog mac & cheese

Southern

Mac & Cheese Store
60 E. Lake St.
312-262-7622

It may have been years since a frazzled babysitter made this for you, but the storefront spin-off of Cary Taylor's food truck serves its own version of the Midwestern favorite. It's just what it sounds like: a grilled all-beef hot dog sliced up and mixed into mac noodles sauced with American cheese ($8.99).

Rating: 2

Humboldt crack bars

Tipsy Cake

1944 N. Damen Ave.
773-384-4418

These highly addictive little slices have a coconut crust, topped with a layer of caramel filling with imported Australian golden syrup and chocolate ganache. Tipsy Cake owner Naomi Levine says they got their name when neighborhood police officers started knocking on the bakery door late at night asking for "crack" ($2.50 per slice).

Rating: 4

Maple and bacon doughnuts

2 Sparrows

553 W. Diversey Ave.
773-234-2320

When these doughnuts were first introduced, the kitchen was overwhelmed by the response and made them a signature menu staple. Sweet brioche dough is topped with maple-glazed bacon bits from Gunthorp Farms in Indiana. Look for a second rotating companion doughnut stuffed with seasonal ingredients ($4.50).

LENNY GILMORE PHOTOS/REDEYE

Steak and ale pie

Pleasant House Bakery
964 W. 31st St.
773-523-7437

This Bridgeport pie shop has a wide variety of hearty options fit for chilly days. Go for the steak and ale pie ($7.50), which features all-natural beef cooked in a seasonal ale with shallots and carrots, all encased in a super-flaky pie crust and served piping hot.

Rating: 3

A new twist on braids

Chicago Tribune

Braids have come a long way since their "Little House on the Prairie" days. Lately they've marched down designers' runways along with the models.

For the spring 2012 collections shown during New York Fashion Week in early September, Frederic Fekkai stylists topped Marchesa models' low ponytails with a tight fishtail braid.

For Rachel Zoe's show, Fekkai stylists wove a few small, loose braids underneath the top layer of models' hair to create a slept-on look. Stylist Ted Gibson did twists for Lela Rose's show. Last spring Gibson wove fabric into models' braids for Rachel Roy's runway show.

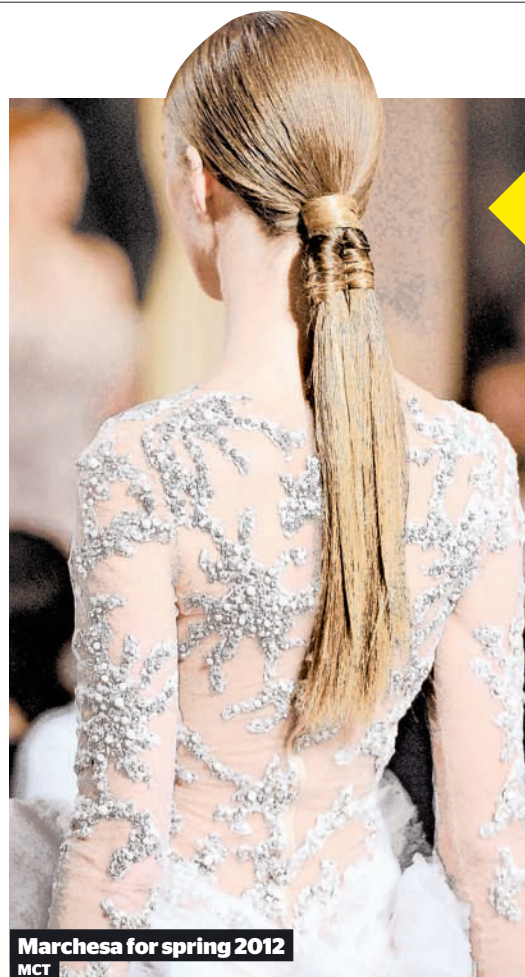

Celebrities such as Diane Kruger are updating the basic single braid with roughed-up texture and sometimes pulling it to one side to fall over the shoulder. "The beauty of this look is that you don't need hair to be super-smooth," celebrity stylist Jacqueline Bush said.

Before braiding, she lightly teases and mists each section with Rene Furterer Vegetal Finishing Spray ($24; beauty.com), allowing it to dry before moving on to the next section.

Doubling as accessory, the braid as headband has evolved into the braid as barrette, holding a half-up, half-down style in place. YouTube tutorials cover styles such as a "half-Dutch braid headband" or "2-strand twist rope braid."

Here's a how-to for the Marchesa runway look that those with long hair can try at home.

Marchesa for spring 2012
MCT

Low Ponytail with Fishtail Braid

1 Part hair on the side at the top of the head and pull smaller section of hair off to the side. Pull the large section into a low ponytail at nape of neck and secure with a coated elastic band. Slick the smaller section back to wrap around the top of the ponytail and conceal the band. Pin on the underside.

2 The ponytail starts with a 3-inch-long fishtail braid. To make it, separate the ponytail into two equal sections. Take a thin quarter-inch to half-inch strand from the back of the right section and cross it over to join the front of the left section. Now from the back of the left section take a quarter-inch to half-inch strand and cross it over to join the front of the right section. Your next strand will come from the back of the right section. Cross it over to join the front of the left section.

3 Repeat pattern until you are three inches down the ponytail. To secure braid, push one pin up through the center in back.

FACEOFF

MATT DAMON VS. BEN AFFLECK

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

Matt 'n' Ben. Affleck 'n' Damon. Matty-pie and Benny-poo. (OK, we made that last one up.) This fearsome twosome rose to fame, power and "imagining them without their shirts on" status with 1997's "Good Will Hunting," and now they're back in action, deadline.com reports. Affleck will direct and Damon will star in a biopic about crime kingpin Whitey Bulger. But in the 14 years since their last major pairing, who's winning? A RedEye faceoff settles the score. DAMORAN@TRIBUNE.COM | @REDEYEDANA

Matt Damon: The good = "Ocean's Eleven," "The Departed."
The bad = "Stuck On You," "The Adjustment Bureau." ❌

FLICKS

☐ Ben Affleck: The good = "The Town," "Armageddon" (shut up, you loved it).
The bad = "Surviving Christmas," "Gigli," "Forces of Nature."

WINNER: MATT. Really, we had to look a lot harder to find the rough stuff—other than "Stuck On You." We still can't believe that happened.

After dating "Hunting" co-star Minnie Driver and Winona Rider, he locked it in with the hopefully more down-to-earth Luciana Bozan in 2005. They have four kids. ❌

LADIES

☐ That whole thing with Jennifer Lopez totally made us forget that he dated Gwyneth Paltrow. He's now married to Jennifer Garner; they have two daughters and are expecting a third child.

WINNER: MATT. Sorry Ben, but there are some things that can't be forgiven. Bennifer is one of them.

Worked to fight poverty and AIDS in Africa; definitely did not have sex with Sarah Silverman in the "I'm [bleeping] Matt Damon" video. ☐

OTHER VENTURES

❌ Campaigned for John Kerry; directed "Gone Baby Gone" and "The Town."

WINNER: BEN. His directorial work has been nothing short of great—maybe he's thinking a permanent new career direction?

Named People magazine's runner-up for Sexiest Man Alive in 2002, 2004, 2005 and 2006 before finally locking in the big win in 2007. ❌

SEXINESS

☐ Picked up People's Sexiest Man Alive cover in 2002. That may have had something to do with the 6.1-carat ring he gave La Lopez that year.

WINNER: MATT. We don't put a ton of stock in this sort of silly frippery, but, seriously, FOUR-TIME runner-up?

OVERALL WINNER

MATT. He's only getting better with age—and we can't wait to see him stretch his creative muscles in the Liberace biopic.

Accio DVDs!

"Harry Potter" fans, you may want to make sure your collection is complete, because, according to Deadline, Warner Bros. will be pulling the films from circulation starting Dec. 29. Just in time (we're sure this is just a coincidence) for holiday shopping.

OLD GEEZY

Lil Wayne (above) told GQ he plans to retire by the time he's 35. If you're keeping track, that's a few more years than when he talked to XXL magazine—when he said he'd retire by 30. The reason for stepping aside? His kids. "Six[more] years, I can do this Lil Wayne thing, and my boys will be about 7 and 8 years old. ... Whatever they're doing. Sports. Whatever they're into. That's where I am." TRIBUNE FILE PHOTO

THE DIGIT

1.72 MILLION

That's how many viewers the Chicago-set show "Boss," which stars Kelsey Grammer, brought in for its premiere night on Starz.

"Foot" fan

If the stars of "Footloose" were stressed about what Kevin Bacon (left), star of the original, would think of the remake, they can rest easy.

Bacon tweeted a picture of his ticket to the movie, as well as some props. "U guys rocked it!" he said.

Top dogs

Jason Sudeikis, Will Ferrell and Zach Galifianakis in a comedy about politicians? We'll vote for that. The three are set to star in "Dog Fight," a comedy about political rivals in South Carolina, according to The Hollywood Reporter. If for nothing else, a movie where Will Ferrell talks in a Southern accent is worth seeing.

Hotel Du Snooki

If you want to taste the "Jersey Shore" (above) life (we imagine the flavor as a combo of Jaeger, tanning oil and creatine), USA Today reports a stay at the cast's house can be yours for $2,500 a night. Smart travelers take their cues from another visitor who brought her own sheets. MTV PHOTO
